The FAN "Summer 2021" Issue is Here!

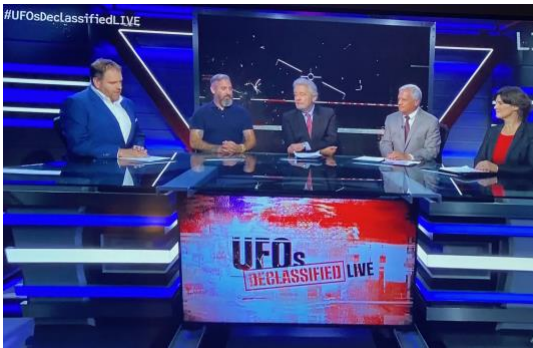

Yep, FANs. You read it right. We're doing something a bit different this year. Instead of a communicate every two weeks during the summer, we're bringing you two "summer specials" instead. This one is the first of two editions. We'll continue to update the website's "Spotlights" section as we have (every w weeks), but this newsletter will come to you in two tranches over the summer. We hope that this finds you all well and enjoying your summer and, if you'd like to send us a photo or two of what you're doing, we'd love to see 'em. So without further ado, we welcome you, dear FANs, to "Summer Edition 1". Here are a few images that have been seen as FANs travel the highways and byways:

PanAm 103 Memorial, Montauk, Long Island

If you are not aware of this Pan Am 103 memorial in Montauk, Long Island, take a look...it's truly a spectacular and moving memorial.

UFO: Declassified Live

Hosted by Josh Gates, a live panel of experts unpacked and weighed in on the long-awaited Department of Defense and Office of the Director of National Intelligence report about Unidentified Flying Objects, recently released to Congress. Our own Bob Wallace served as one of the panelists on this 30 June broadcast.

A memorial depicting the face of terrorism, A healing sculpture garden for the world

Excerpt from the website: "...on December 21, 1988, my first born son, Alexander, age 21, was brutally murdered aboard Pan Am 103 in the stormy night skies over the Scottish village of Lockerbie, my most meaningful life's work began. I had been working as a sculptor for many years, but this began a whole new phase in my creative life. Initially I portrayed myself, not only at that moment of hearing the heartbreaking news, but also in varying positions of grief, rage and hopelessness. Soon other mothers and widows asked to participate; each one having lost loved ones on this fateful flight.

There are 75 larger than life size pieces, each portraying a mother or wife at that moment when they first heard the awful news of the death of their loved one to that terrorist act.
